The Strikers Win

London, June 24.—Striking Canadian seamen from ships in British ports will return to work this weekend-on their own terms. Acceptance by Canadian ship-owners of the men's proposals has averted a threatened strike by 27,000 British dockers, and is expected to mean the end of the three-month old strike of Canadian crows throughout the world.

The London agreement "will undoubtedly set the pattern in other countries affected by the strike", Mr. Bill Arland, the men's strike leader here, sald in an interview tith the ·London evening newspaper Star.—Reuter.

of tenancy tribunal disputes. The important feature of the Reform Club's proposition is the necessity of giving a written undertaking to fulfil duties in the interests of the Colony. In effect it is an onth of allegiance, and, being voluntary, is likely to be taken only by those who genuinely desire to become a citizen of Hongkong in the interests and for the welfare of the Colony. As the petition expresses it, the genuine Hongkong citizen will be made to feel that he "belongs." Nor do we see any reason why the right to make this declaration and to possess a Certificate of Citizenship

should not be extended to British subjects resident in Hongkong as well as non-British. It cannot involve any loss of nationality, nor need such a declaration conflict with the allegiance a British subject automatically owes to the Crown.

On the contrary it re-emphasises this nlieginnce, and consolidates it. The Reform Club's object in making this suggestion is clearly stated in the petition.

It is not only intended to widen the franchise, but to "build up, on the basis of the Hongkong Citizens Register, a large and loyal body of true citizens of this British Colony of Hongkong, who will have at heart the interest and security of this Colony as a paramount and overriding interest." The objective is com-interest. The suggestions command close attention and consideration for they appear to possess the proper fundamenprime qualification for the franchise as embodied in both Mr Landale's original motion and Sir Man Kam Lo's amend-

British subject. It then proceeds to suggest another category of voter, which is to be created—the Hongkong citizen.

Dutch Evacuating Jogiakarta

VER WONOSARI

Batavia, June 24.—The Dutch Army officially started on Friday morning to withdraw its occupation forces from Jogjakarta, the Republican capital it captured with a surprise paratroop landing six months ago.

Army headquarters in an announcement in Batayia said that the entire Netherlands garrison force will have withdrawn from Jogjakarta within six days as agreed through the U.N. Commission on Wednesday.

The withdrawal operation began on Friday in the outer areas of the Residency which has a radius of some 20 miles. The Dutch refused to reveal the strength of the occupation forces, but informed quarters estimated the brigade that occupied this ancient Javanese capital since it fell on December 19 at about 4,000.

The film from which these pictures are taken has startled some people in Britain, but STEPHEN WATTS says:

It is about people whom, before fancy. jargon arrived, we would have called mad, about a place we would call a lunatic asylum, but it does not sensationalise

TOR once, the censor is right in his "adults only" decision. Children shouldn't see this film, but to have put' it in the "horrifle" category, with the gruesome-for-fun subjects like "Dracula," would have been absurd and insulting.

This story of a woman who has a mental breakdown does not exploit her suffering and her cure. It reports them.

If it takes you close to a subject you don't often think about it is no bad thing. It can only make you more sympathetic to the pitiable deranged.

Magnificent Performance

NE thing is beyond all the controversy which rages and will continue to rage around this picture—the performance of Olivia de Havilland is magnificent and moving. Lee Genn, whose voice alone is therapeutic, makes psychiatry a patient, dedicated science instead of the smart-Aleck three-eard trick Hollywood so often suggests it to be.

But don't chase after "The "The Snake Pit" if your aim in cinema-going is to escape into sunshine, stardust, and life in primary Technicolours.

GOODWINS BEATEN:

TAOR the first time in history L the Goodwin Sands have surrendered some of their swallowed booty-1,280 tons of lead, worth more than £100,000. Salvage contractors and divers have retrieved the lead from the wreckage of the American freighter, North Eastern Victory, which went aground on the sands on Christmus Evc. 1940. Mr W. Robinson, officer in charge of operations said: "It is the first time cargo has been salvaged from a vossel which has settled below water on the Goodwins," Salvage work was started in 1947 and the result is a personal thumph for three divers -

E. Aplin and J. G. Smith, of Southampton, and D. Youngs, of Pinmill, near Harwich. They worked at a depth of 70 feet in complete darkness, and sometimes were hard at it for eight hours a day. One of their best days was on Whit Monday when they raised 40 tons of lead. The divers operated from the

Hundreds of jeeping Ruhr tradesmen, who barred the gates of the four condemned plants to British-supervised dismantling teams, are the spearhead of an organised attack on the rights and powers of the occupation forces in Germany.

Written orders by General Bishop's staff to the dismantling labourers were contemptuously ignored, and the workers in the plants warned the demolition gangs what would happen if they obeyed General Bishop.

High Church dignitaries who ordered a "week of prayer for the British;" the widely tipped future German President, 73year-old Dr Konrad Adenauer: white-haired Dr Hans Boeckler, friend of the British T.U.C. and head of the West German trades unions—all are behind this giant German conspiracy to save industrial plants.

a pointer to the United Government's housing policy, to fashion in to technical this year's Ideal Exhibition in London, was worth close study and encouragement. One of most interesting exhibits, which attracted crowds of inquirers, was that staged by Britain's Ministry of Health, which is responsible not only for formulating housing policy, but also for the design, size and equipment of most of the homes now being built in Ministry's exhibit displayed the modern idea of a traditional English urban terrace of three, three-storeyed charming London-stock 'bricks; yellow with large windows, wellequipped kitchens and bathrooms. They also had cupboards and labour-saving gas or electric panel fires in the bedrooms, and open fire places in the living rooms which the climate in Britain dictates and its people demand.

different types dwelling were displayed homes for the large family, the small family, the childless couple and for those persons who live alone.

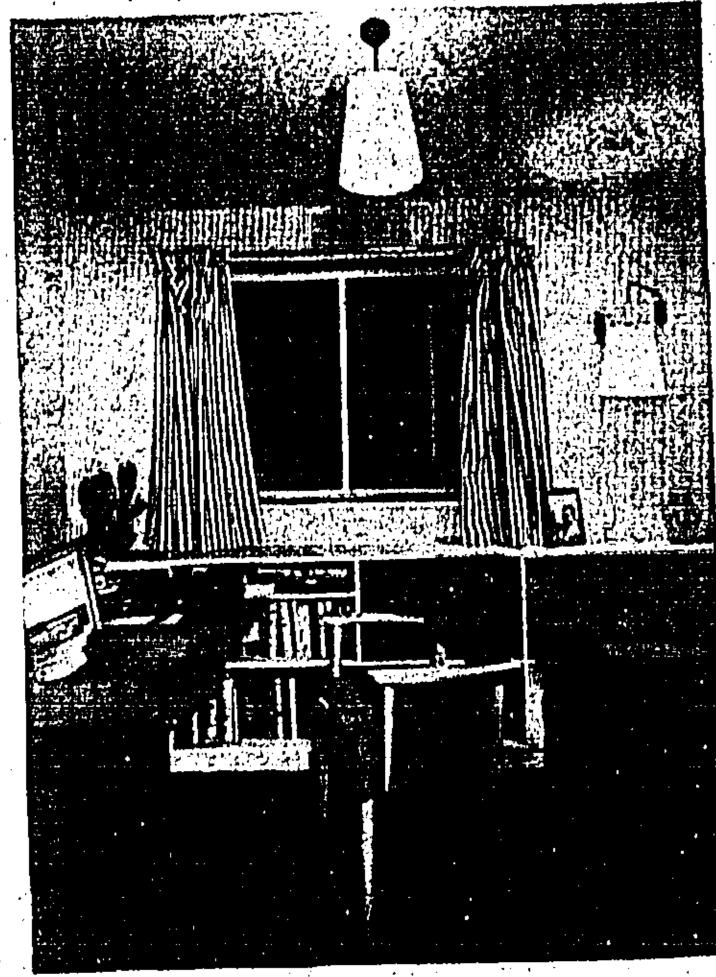

Large Family House

The special virtue of the three-storey house is that it enables large families to enjoy the privacy of a house and garden of their own in those areas where the only alternative would be a large flat in a multi-storey block. only a small number of modern terraces have three-storey been built, the idea is likely to gain favour in the re-housing development of thickly populated districts.

NEW OFFSIDE RULE WAY ALTER FOOTBALL

By PETER DITTON

In the little Scottish town of Pitlochry last week, a decision was taken which may alter the whole game of football. Four hundred miles to the South, in the garrison town of Aldershot, Billy Mc-Cracken, the manager of the local football team must be smiling to himself. For Billy is the man indirectly responsible for the decision.

Just over twenty years ago McCracken, one of the best full-backs in the game and an Irish International, played for Newcastle. In those days the offside rule said that a player receiving the ball with less than three opponent's in front of the opposing goal should be off-side.

McCracken used his brains. With his teammates he worked out the ideal scheme for preventing the opposition from scoring. The Irishman used to play well up-field and when an opposition raid appeared likely to develop, he just moved up another couple of yards and threw the opposing forwards off-side.

Preference Play Defeats Contract

BY WILLIAM E. MCKENNEY

EEMS TAYLOR, composer, music critic and commentator for the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, takes part in a very interesting nctivity called "Week-end with Mr Taylor tells me each week, three high youngsters who have musical appreciation and ability ard selected from various parts of the country.

I met three of the youngsters ..one Sunday evening, and discovered that Trina Stiles, of Spokane, Wash, is quite a bridge fan. She had Just learned something about the suit preference play, and she known the importance of playing hard against part-score contracts as well as game and slam contracts. There is rhythm and timing in music, and Miss Stiles used both of those qualities in today's hand to hold her opponents to two spades.

On her partner's king and nce of clubs, Miss Stiles played the queen and eight-spot. Then East led the nine of clubs and West trumped with the four of spades.

Miss Stiles knew that the lend of the nine of clubs by her partner was the suit preference play. If East wanted her to return the higher suit he would play the nine. If East wanted the lower suit returned, he would lead the five of clubs. So when Miss Stiles trumped the trick, she returned a heart: East won with the ace and led back the other club. There were no clubs in dummy, but this gave West an opportunity to get in another trump, since declarer had the fourth club. Thus East and West took the first five tricks.
